

[DELIVERY NOTES: Conversational, direct to camera. Measured pace — let the pauses land. No energy performance needed. This is a peer telling a story to a peer.]

My team was visible, well-resourced, and prioritized.

I had no idea I was about to destroy that.

When I got promoted, everything I had been doing for them just stopped. The relationships, the advocacy, the internal marketing. Nobody picked it up. Nobody knew it needed to be picked up.

I had been so good at protecting them from that part of the job that they had never learned it. And they fell into obscurity for years.

If you are irreplaceable to your team, you are also not promotable.

What are you doing for your team right now that they would not know how to do without you?
